

HOSPITALITY CASE STUDY

Sunstar Alaska.

ANCHORAGE, ALASKA

GLACIER WATER, JUST BEYOND THE STAY

*The best stays leave behind a specific kind of mess: rumpled sheets, a coffee gone cold, a laugh caught mid breath. I photograph the lived moment, not the staged one.*

ONE STAY, START TO FINISH

A stay that starts at breakfast.

A women-owned and run stay, where breakfast is cooked to order, the dogs come out to say hello, and the birches outside are going gold. One full stay, photographed from the welcome sign on the wall to the last unmade bed.

Planning the Day

Maps across the duvet, juice on the nightstand, a laugh she was not performing.

Looking Down the Stairs

The name on the wall, the house below.

Adventure Awaits

The welcome wall says it before anyone does.

Through the Door

Lamps on, snacks stocked, the bed made up and waiting.

Lamplight

Sconce on, the whole room in one frame.

Just Arrived

Suitcase by the bed, a sweater thrown over the end. The room is already becoming theirs.

The Map on the Floor

Every map in the house spread out across the floor. The trip, being planned.

Left Unmade

Linen that has been slept in.

The Full Spread

Waffles, French toast, berries, a skillet still hot, juice poured, and a hand already reaching in.

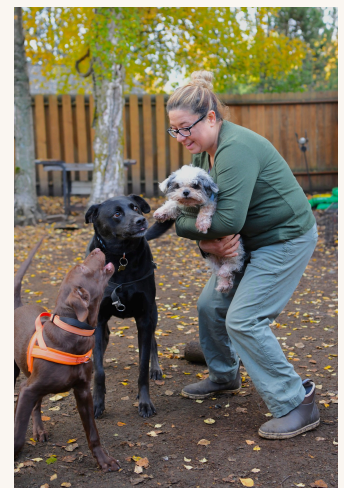

Breakfast, Served

Carried out by the host, plate in both hands.

Golden on the Griddle

Close enough to hear it.

The Welcome Committee

The host and the house dogs.

First Light, First Coffee

Mug in hand at the window, birches turning gold outside. Quiet, captured.

Where Breakfast Starts

The resident hens, out on the deck.

Breakfast Tray

Toast, juice and the property's own mug on a branded board.

First Snow Up Top

Autumn below, winter arriving above.

*Empty rooms describe inventory.
Occupied rooms describe a trip.*
