

HOSPITALITY PHOTOGRAPHY & VIDEO

The feeling of being there.

THE WINDOW · GHENT, GOLDEN HOUR

*The best stays leave behind a specific kind of mess:
rumpled sheets, a coffee gone cold, a laugh caught mid breath. I photograph the lived moment, not the staged one.*

SUNSTAR ALASKA · AUTUMN 2026

A stay that starts at breakfast.

A family-run stay where breakfast is cooked to order, the dogs come out to say hello, and the birches outside are going gold. One full stay, photographed from the welcome sign to the last unmade bed.

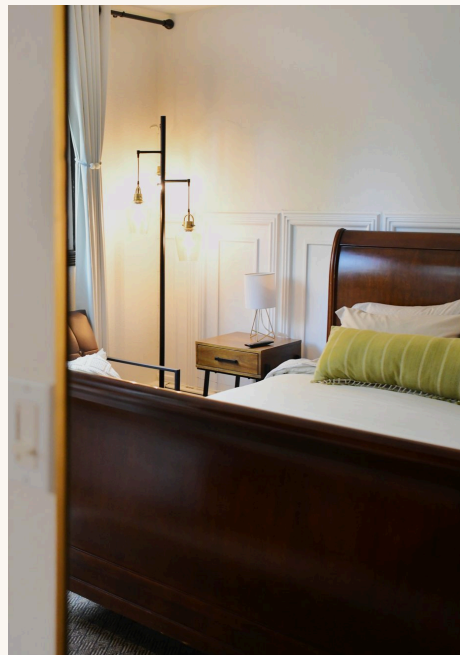

Planning the Day

Maps across the duvet, juice on the nightstand, a laugh she was not performing.

Adventure Awaits

The welcome wall says it first.

Through the Door

Lamps on, bed made up and waiting.

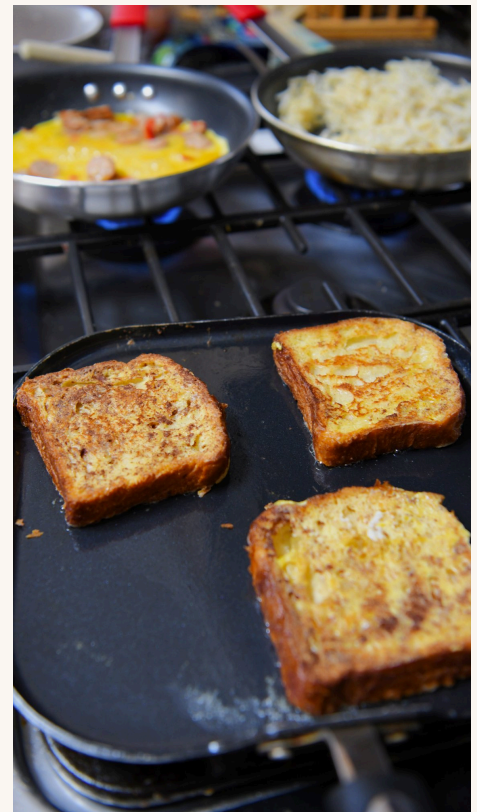

Looking Down the Stairs

The name on the wall, plants on every ledge, the whole house in one frame.

Breakfast, Served

Carried out by the host: pastries, fruit, juice poured. A table that says somebody got up early for you.

Golden on the Griddle

Close enough to hear it.

Cooked to Order

Two pans going, every plate made fresh.

The Welcome Committee

The host and the house dogs, all three.

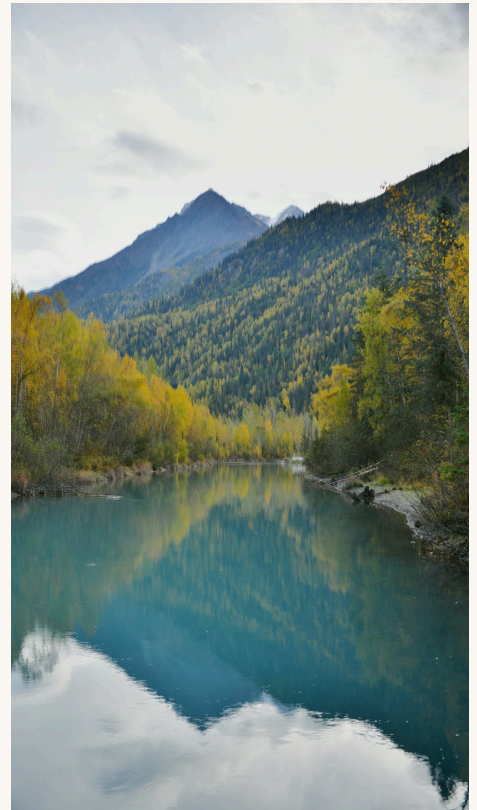

Front and Center

He knew where the camera was.

First Light, First Coffee

Mug in hand at the window, birches turning gold outside. Quiet is hard to sell. A photograph can do it.

Glacier Blue

The water really is that color.

Breakfast Tray

The property's own mug on a branded board.

Left Unmade

Linen that has been slept in.

First Snow Up Top

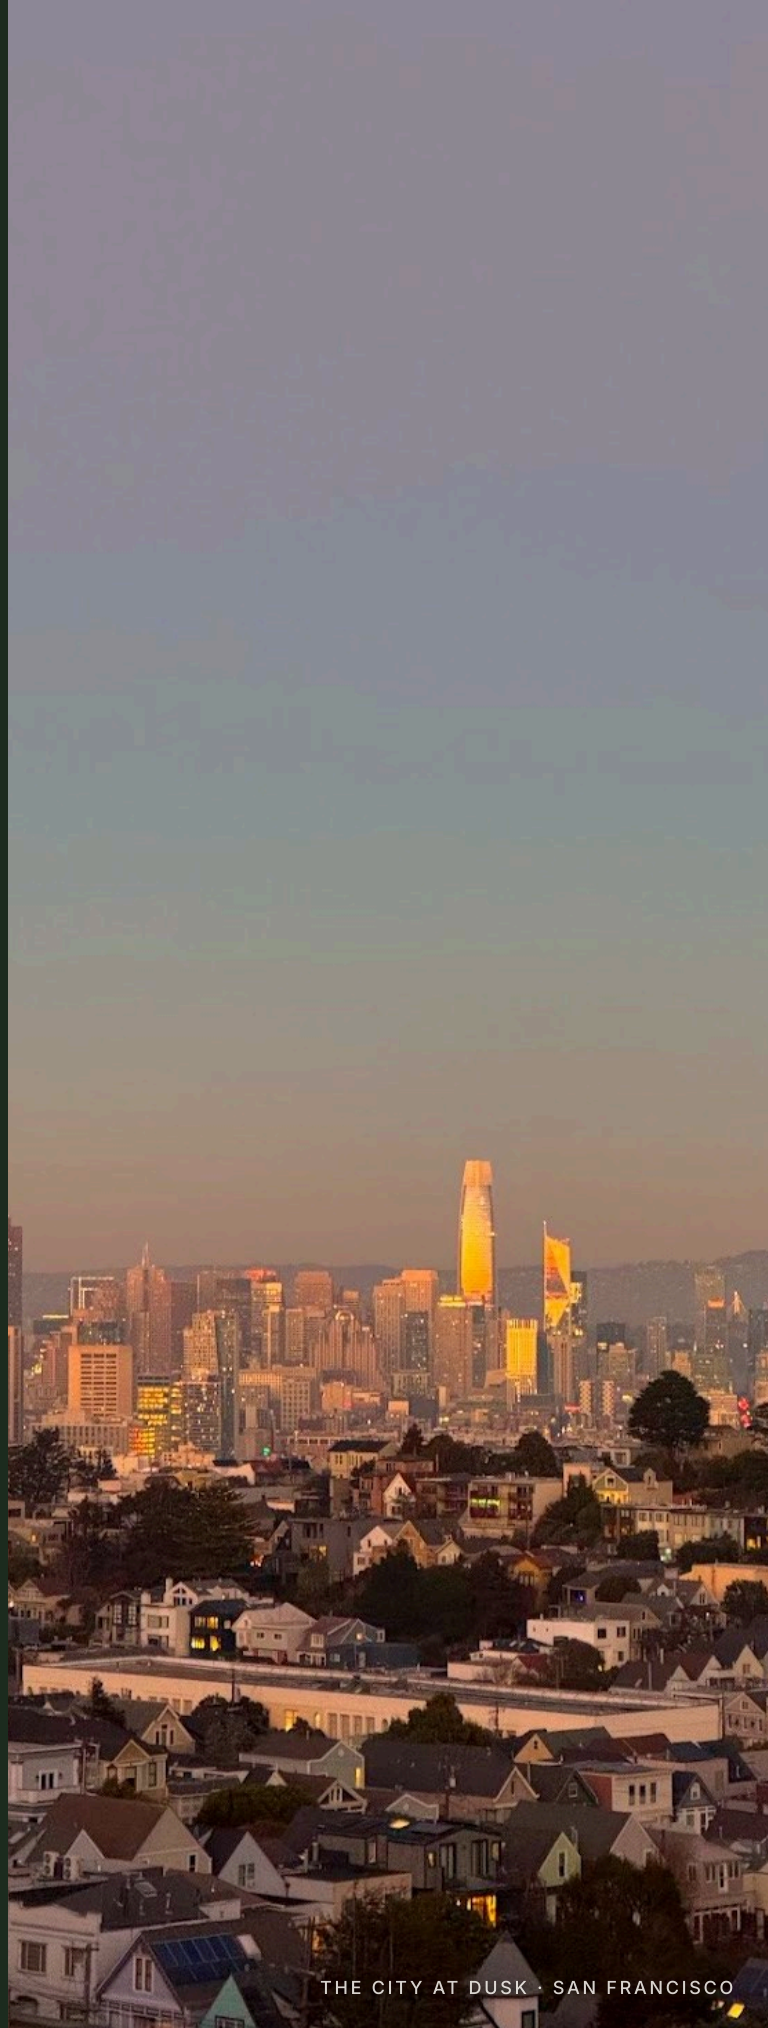

Autumn below, winter arriving above.

SELECTED WORK · EARLIER STAYS

Rooms that look lived in.

Hotels, lodges and stays from Ghent to the pine forest to the jungle, all shot in natural light with one warm, consistent edit.

THE CITY AT DUSK · SAN FRANCISCO

The Lobby, Lived In

Wrapped up on sofas, tea going cold, the pine forest pressing against the glass. A common space being used.

The Moody Room

Exposed beams, lamplight on dark wood.

The Room, Occupied

Shoes still on, phone in hand.

Joy, Caught

She was already laughing. I did not ask her to.

The Bed, Left Unmade

I did not make the bed. That is the whole note.

Architecture as Story

Point up and let the sun do something reckless.

Detail and Crowd

Sunflowers sharp, the room warm and busy behind.

The Arrival Space

The room tells you everything about where you have arrived.

Morning Coffee, The Ritual

Mist, feet up, nowhere to be.

Morning Coffee, The Quiet

Sunrise burning through field fog.

The Signature Drink

Sharp on the label, soft on the room.

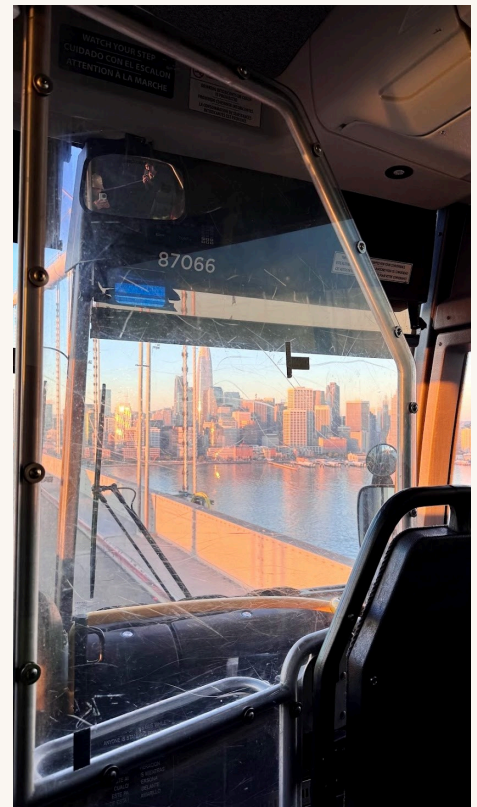

The Pool from Above

Two pools, A-frames, jungle in low fog.

Full Immersion

Scale sells an excursion.

The Unexpected POV

San Francisco through a bus windshield.

The standard of work.

Great hospitality photography is measured by what it does for a property, not how good the files look on a hard drive: performance on OTA listings, longevity across campaigns, and whether a guest looking at the image thinks, I want to be there.

Lived in imagery ages well

Lifestyle content does not date the way catalog photography does.

A single shoot in every format builds a coherent presence.

EVERY PARTNERSHIP IS TAILORED

Some offerings. All negotiable.

These are starting points, a sense of what a collaboration might look like. Every property is different, and the deliverables should reflect that.
